MELT

SEIZING URBAN SPACES. Quebec choreographer Noémie Lafrance, now ensconced in New York, will be in Montreal to present Melt, a feast of textures and sensuality. Admission is free to the Esplanade at Place des Arts to see this installation/dance piece performed high overhead. Fasted to an exterior wall, the five performers, their bodies covered in beeswax and lanolin, unfold their dripping wet limbs in a desperate attempt to escape harsh immobility as they literally melt under the heat of the lights and the sun. Renowned for her dance performances in highly unusual sites such as a dilapidated swimming pool, a spectacular staircase or an indoor parking garage, the choreographer brings out the expressive colours of a given space, never dissociating the dance from the site itself or from the audience watching it. By transforming urban spaces into a playground, Noémie Lafrance goes straight to where we live, opening our eyes wide with wonder.
